Building 82 - The Power House was built a century ago by the RAF to provide their base with electricity, ensuring that their Bomber Training Station remained self-sufficient.

82 stands on the Western Avenue of Bicester Heritage, just inside Gate 1 to the Bicester Motion estate. Still very much 'in its juice' the building is packed with character, just imagine if the wall could talk!

Exposed brickwork, a vast beam crane to lift the now absent generators, clay tile flooring, huge Crittal windows and glazed brickwork details add to the evocative interior.

The Power House features prominently in Warner Brothers' blockbuster The Imitation Game, which tells the story of codebreaking in WW2 by following the genius inventor of the Enigma machine, Alan Turing. The film starred Benedict Cumberbatch, Charles Dance and Kiera Knightley, all of whom spent time filming in Building 82 in 2013.

Today, The Power House offers a generous open-plan environment that blends authentic industrial heritage with a warm, welcoming atmosphere. Its rich history gives the space a sense of character and gravitas that would be near impossible to replicate in a modern build. It is a place people want to spend time in and connect with like-minded individuals.

Previous occupants of 82 include iconic British car manufacturer Morgan Motor Cars Ltd and the record-breaking Chinese electric car manufacturer Nio.
